A Breath of French Air, | H.E. Bates Companion

The title is a play on the expression "a breath of fresh air."

The New York Times reviewer says "if I find this recital of inept gambolings and pseudo-lasciviousness deplorable, it is because I remember the time when 'Fair Stood the Wind for France,' when 'The Jacaranda Tree' perfumed the air, when the name of H.E. Bates stood for short stories of rural England that were alive with poignant truth.
