McClintock lays all the complexities and horror of adolescence bare. She has the two sisters trade turns narrating, with Kelly's narrative written as a screenplay and Tegan's composed as first-person journal entries. The brisk pace, solid character development and inventive structuring make for fast, page-turning reading, and at all wraps up with an unpredictable plot twist and ending

Norah McClintock's suspenseful new novel, She Said/She Saw, takes readers into the minds of two teenaged sisters. Seventeen-year-old Kelly sees life as cinematic - "like a movie or a tv drama", while slightly older Tegan sees life as more of an epic novel with herself as the heroine. Does the way we perceive life make our 'story'?

What Tegen said vs what she saw makes up the title of this book, and it's the basis for the mystery. Norah McClintock is the reigning mystery queen with Canadian kids, and she tells a good story. Kelly and Tegen alternate points of view, with Kelly's view being presented in film script form, and Tegen's in first person point of view.
