The more I see of men, the more I love my dog. [Olivia Edward; Alex Hallatt] – Dogs are better than men, it's obvious! They are cheaper and easier to please. They are always over the moon to see you, loyal to the last, and don't care when you put on weight.

The more I know people the more I love my dog ...

The more I know people the more I love my dog (By Diogenes of Sinope Greek philosopher) is a pretty famous saying to state that whereas humans are selfish, betray, ungrateful, etc a dog would never do such a thing thus being animals more valuable than humans. I don't know if in Poland people use it. I am looking for a translation, I don't know if it was rephrased in Polish but keeping its meaning.
