Jones places us in the world and mind of a post-war teenage outcast, and with with taut, skilled prose masterfully tugs at our heart strings and messes with our heads. Her title character Lewis truly suffers, both from the hypocritical and neurotic world he inhabits, and from his own flawed, tormented character.

Writing in The Guardian, Julia Raeside voiced her initial concerns about the adaptation, saying: "Sadie Jones risked smashing a perfect thing when she signed up to adapt her book The Outcast (BBC1, Sunday) for television. The novel, one of my favourites, bursts with a fragile intensity that, while filmic, seemed unlikely to survive the transition".
